

History of Arizona's Title Loan Law, the Sunset of Payday Lending, and the Emergence of Payday Loan Lookalike "Registration" Lending at Title Loan Rates

Separate laws enacted in 2000 by the Arizona legislature exempted two forms of predatory high-cost lending from protections of the Consumer Lender usury law: Deferred Presentments (payday loans) and Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transactions (title loans).

Consumer Lender Law Protections

The Arizona usury law that governs cash loans to consumers is the Consumer Lender law, A.R.S. § 6-601 to 6-638, which governs loans up to $10,000 and caps rates at 36% for loan amounts up to $3,000 and 24 percent for loan amounts over $3,000 up to $10,000. Lenders are permitted to also charge a five percent fee up to $150. The Consumer Lender law prohibits balloon payment loans and provides other consumer protections. It applies to closed end and open-end credit, and to unsecured and secured cash loans. Consumer Lenders are licensed by the Arizona Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions.

Sale/Lease-Back Title Loan Transactions

Prior to 2000, "title loans" were made in Arizona as sale-leaseback transactions to evade the usury limits of the Consumer Lender law. The Arizona Republic newspaper¹ explained how sale/lease-back transactions worked, including a requirement that the customer have a car that is paid off to sell to the company for a fraction of its book value. The company kept the title, now signed over to it, along with a set of keys. The sale/lease-back product required a vehicle owned free and clear by the consumer.

Failed Attempt to Legalize Title Loans at Triple-digit Rates

In 1998, HB 2390 was introduced in the Arizona legislature, backed by the lender Title Loans of America, based in Atlanta, Georgia, to authorize loans secured by clear titles. HB 2390 amended the Consumer Lender law to add a single payment "Consumer Title Loan" product that cost 25% per month or 300% annually. The legislative Bill Summary for H.B. 2390 stated that "if a consumer owns an automobile, that person may take the certificate of title to a consumer title lender for the purposes of securing a 30-day consumer title loan."² The bill required a licensee to hold only unencumbered certificates of title as security for Consumer Title Loans.³ This legislation was opposed by the Attorney General and failed to pass. Later press coverage identified the backers of the 1998 bill as having ties to organized crime, which the bill's sponsors denied knowing.⁴

Arizona Attorney General Challenged Sale-Leaseback Lending

Following defeat of authorizing title loan legislation, lenders continued to market sale-leaseback loans at triple-digit rates in Arizona. The Attorney General sued SAL Leasing, Inc. for charging 300% interest for sale-leaseback loans in violation of the Consumer Lender law usury cap. The trial court issued a declaratory judgment finding that the Consumer Lender Act, A.R.S. § 6-601 to 6-638 (1999) did not apply to SAL Leasing, Inc. and dismissed the Attorney General's counterclaim and denied its request for injunctive relief. That decision was appealed to the Court of Appeals which reversed the lower court decision on October 3, 2000.⁵

Title Loan Industry Won Authorizing Legislation

While the Attorney General's challenge to sale-leaseback title lending was underway, the 2000 Arizona legislature enacted SB 1244 to amend Title 44, Chap. 2.1, the Motor Vehicle Time Sales law, which governed auto sales financing credit. The legislation was backed by the Arizona Title Loan Association. Likely seeking to avoid the politically toxic label "title loans," SB 1244 added a definition of "Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transactions" to the law that applied to financing of auto purchase loans, not to the Consumer Lender law that applies to cash loans.

SB 1244 amended sections 44-181, 44-289, and 44-291 of Arizona Revised Statutes. No changes have been made to this law since it was enacted in 2000. It is our view that the title "Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction" was chosen to avoid the stigma associated with "title loans," as well as to distinguish the cash loans authorized by this bill from the purchase money loans otherwise subject to the Motor Vehicle Time Sales law. There is nothing to indicate that the "Secondary" in this designation was intended to apply to loans where a lender would seek to obtain a second lien on the encumbered vehicle used to "secure" the loan.

"Registration" Loans Were Not Authorized by SB 1244

There is no legislative history that SB 1244 was intended to authorize "registration" loans to consumers who did not hold a clear title to the vehicle used to secure the loan. The legislative fact sheet for S.B. 1244 described the intent of the bill to legalize sale-leaseback transactions, stating: "Secondary motor vehicle finance transactions, as defined in this bill, refer to short-term (usually three to four months), fairly small (average of $800) loans that are secured with a motor vehicle. Because such transactions may require consumers to conditionally sell their vehicle to the lender and then lease it back (the lease payment reflects the monthly finance charge), such transactions are sometimes known as “sale-leaseback” agreements... To clarify how such a transaction works, the following example is offered. A consumer who owns a car free and clear of any liens could obtain these funds from a secondary motor company. The lender and the consumer would execute a contract that could either require the consumer to sell the car and lease it back from the company or simply allow the company to take a secured interest in it... If the consumer failed to make the monthly payments, the lender could repossess the vehicle pursuant to the Uniform Commercial Code. ”⁶ (Emphases added.)

Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction (SMVFT) Loans are Title Loans

Despite the “secondary motor vehicle transaction” label, SB 1244 was understood at the time of passage as authorizing car title loans. “So-called car title loans... car owners sell their vehicles to a lender and then have to lease the car back.”⁷ No mention was made in any Arizona legislative documents or news coverage at the time the law was enacted that Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction loans could be “secured” by an encumbered title for consumers who had a vehicle registration but not a clear title. Two years after the bill was enacted, press stories about title loans in Arizona noted that borrowers had to own clear titles to vehicles used to get loans.⁸

Early SMVFT Lenders Made Title-Secured Loans

In 2005, the Arizona Consumers Council surveyed Arizona title lenders as part of a project by Consumer Federation of America. The Arizona survey covered seven title lenders and noted that all of them were making “title loans”, not sale-leaseback transactions. Those lenders charged lien fees (since prohibited by DIFI as not authorized by law)⁹ which would only be needed for loans secured by clear titles and said that they repossessed cars when the borrower did not repay. “Registration” loans were not the product being offered in 2005.¹⁰ Currently, DIFI still explains that a “title Loan” is “a personal loan against the title of a motor vehicle.”¹¹

Title Loan Law Not Amended to Authorize “Registration” Loans

Despite reform legislation introduced repeatedly in subsequent legislative sessions, the 2000 law to carve title loans out of the Consumer Lender law has not been amended to make any changes, including any industry effort to add explicit authority to “secure” loans with vehicle registrations or to secure loans with access to borrowers’ bank accounts. The Arizona Attorney General and the Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions (previously DFI) have not sponsored or supported any legislation to repeal the title loan law outright or to clarify the “security” requirement of Title 44, Chap. 2.1.

Payday Loans (Deferred Presentments) Authorized in 2000

The same year that title loans were legalized, the Arizona legislature also enacted the “deferred presentment” law to permit payday loans at triple-digit rates secured by a paper check held for future deposit. SB 1266 in 2000 created a product termed “deferred presentments” (payday loans) defined as “a transaction pursuant to a written agreement in which the licensee accepts a check and agrees to hold the check for at least five days before presentment for payment or deposit.”¹² This law had a sunset provision and was eventually terminated June 30, 2010 following failure of the industry to win legislation extending the law or to enact a ballot initiative to enshrine payday lending in the Arizona constitution as Prop 200 in 2008 would have done.

Prop 200’s proposed payday loan product¹³ was a single payment cash loan of $50 to $500, costing $15 per $100 (390% APR for a 14-day payday loan) and secured by a check held for future deposit with the definition of “check” expanded to include “an electronic debit agreement that complies with title 44, Chapter 26,” for a term of five days up to thirty-five days. The Prop 200 ballot text listed as a prohibited practice to “require a customer to provide security for the transaction, other than the presented check...” In other words, Arizona’s Deferred Presentment law and the Prop 200 ballot initiative stated that payday loans were secured by direct access to the borrower’s bank account, either with the borrower’s check held for deposit and by the “electronic debit agreement” added by Prop 200. When Prop 200 was defeated and the payday loan law sunset in mid-2010, the authorization to “secure” a loan with the borrower’s check held for deposit expired as well. Arizona lenders were never authorized to secure a payday loan with electronic access to the borrower’s bank account.

Sunset of Payday Lending/Licensees Switch to Title Loan Licenses

In the run up to the expiration of the payday loan law in 2010, many licensed deferred presentment companies obtained Sales Finance licenses to begin offering title loans at triple-digit rates. On the expiration date of the payday loan law in 2010, all remaining payday lender outlets surrendered their licenses. The Arizona Department of Financial Institutions' July 2010 report listed 41 deferred deposit companies that closed 518 branch stores.¹⁴

Title Lenders Cannot Unilaterally Add a Second Lien to the Borrower's Vehicle

Arizona is a title holding state as of January 2003 when HB 2052 enacted in 2001 took effect.¹⁵ As a result, the lender holds the title until the lien is satisfied at which point the title passes on to the owner or the next title holder. A second lien cannot be filed on a vehicle without consent of the primary lienholder. When the payday loan law sunset, lenders could not add a "second" lien without cooperation by the first lienholder.

In 2010, former payday lender Check Into Cash of Arizona, Inc. began offering Secondary Motor Vehicle finance Transaction loans to consumers with an encumbered title and started the practice of sending letters to first lien holders to ask for permission to file a second lien on vehicles to "secure" registration loans. A Check Into Cash letter to the "Primary Lien Holder" stated "The customer named above has entered into a transaction at Check into Cash in which they gave us a security interest and lien on the motor vehicle identified above. We understand that you have a primary or superior lien on the vehicle and that our lien will be subordinate to your lien. In order to meet the requirements of Arizona law and to allow us to perfect our subordinate lien, please sign below indicating your consent that Check into Cash... may take all steps necessary to note our subordinate lien on this vehicle title."¹⁶

Without permission from the bank, credit union or finance company holding the first lien on the borrower's vehicle, Check Into Cash could not perfect its second lien in order to demonstrate that its loan was "secured" by the borrower's vehicle. First lienholders have no incentive to permit a high-cost lender to add debt to their security for a purchase money vehicle loan. The Arizona Credit Union League noted that the decision was up to each credit union, but suggested to its members that they send a response letter denying consent to a subordinate lien being added to the title and to keep a copy in their files.¹⁷ Even with a second lien, a creditor can only recover defaulted debt if the first lienholder repossesses the vehicle and if there is sufficient value left to claim after the first lien is satisfied. Traditional title lenders often offer to pay off the remaining balance on a vehicle loan to then make a title-secured new loan.

At Sunset, Arizona Attorney General warns Industry and Consumers Against Sham Title Loans

In 2010, advocates warned the Department of Financial Institutions and the Arizona Attorney General that title lenders with Sales Finance licenses would try to evade the Consumer Lender law usury cap following the sunset of payday lending by using a variety of tactics seen in other states, including offering sham title loans. Attorney General Goddard issued a public warning to the industry and to consumers about unsecured “title” loans.¹⁸ The Attorney General’s press release noted tactics used in other states to evade limits on payday lending, including “auto loans.” The Attorney General also warned against “business models or arrangements that, as seen in other states, perpetuate payday lending practices in another guise.” The Arizona Attorney General’s Operation Sunset FAQs stated “Auto title loans are generally given only if you own the vehicle that is securing the loan. If a lender says that ownership of the vehicle or its value don’t really matter, consider those warning signs and report the lender to the Attorney General’s Office.”¹⁹

As noted in the 2010 press release, Attorney General Goddard sent a letter to payday lenders and warned against tactics to continue making illegal high-cost payday loans, including lenders that “offered sham auto title loans.” The letter warned “We will also be watching for business models or arrangements that, as seen in other states, perpetuate payday lending practices in another guise. When evaluating complaints at a post July 1 business transaction is really a payday loan, I will look at the substance of the transaction, not its name.”²⁰

CEI Public Records Request to OAG and DIFI Produced No Additional Information

A public records request for all information on “registration” loans filed with the Office of Attorney General April 18, 2022, resulted in no written records in addition to the Office of Attorney General’s 2010 Operation Sunset FAQs, press release and letter to payday lenders cited in this brief. The Office of Attorney General has apparently communicated with the Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions on the issue of what is required for a loan to be “secured” by the borrower’s vehicle for a loan to qualify as a Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction loan, but those documents were not provided in response to the public records request due to “attorney-client privilege” and “work-product privilege.”²¹

A similar public records request to the Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions submitted July 26, 2022 has not resulted in a substantive response as of September 14, 2022.

No Enforcement Actions Against Sham Title Loans

Following sunset of the payday loan law, the Office of Attorney General did not back up their warnings against fake title loans with any enforcement actions. Attorney General Goddard's term ended when Tom Horne became the Attorney General in 2011.

Attorney General Horn did take action to enforce the sunset of the payday loan law. In 2011, Attorney General Horne warned consumers about collection call scams for payday loans and reminded consumers that payday loans were illegal in Arizona as of June 30, 2010. The OAG press release noted that internet loans are subject to Arizona credit laws and that simply applying for a loan online provided personal financial information being misused by debt collectors.²² The Attorney General also settled with Double C's, LLC doing business as Lowrate.com to stop soliciting Arizona consumers for applications for payday loans.²³ Both the Office of Attorney General and the Department of Financial Institutions took action in 2012 to stop Cash 1, an unlicensed lender, from charging Arizona consumers triple-digit rates for loans disguised as "retail installment sales transactions" using the sale of gift cards.²⁴

Former Payday Lenders Misuse the Title Loan Law

As a result of the failure to enforce the 2010 Attorney General warning against using "fake title loans" to continue making payday loans, a growing segment of licensed title lenders now market two types of loans to Arizona consumers: title-secured loans and "registration" loans to consumers who do not hold a clear title to their vehicle. Many lenders' registration loans require borrowers to have a bank account and to provide access to that account to enable debt collection. In our view Sales Finance licensees without legal authorization are using bank accounts to "secure" these loans, not the borrower's vehicle.

In 2013 the Department of Financial Institutions issued a regulatory alert that warned former payday lenders of the requirement to be licensed as Consumer Lenders and to comply with the usury limits and protections of the Consumer Lender law. This Alert was updated and reissued in 2016.²⁵ In those Alerts, DFI did not instruct former payday lenders to obtain a Sales Finance license to continue to make payday loans disguised as “registration” loans under the title loan law.

Arizona Regulators Take No Action to Stop Sales Finance Licensees from Securing Loans with Bank Account Access

The Arizona law authorizing high-cost loans to be secured with the borrower’s check expired June 30, 2010. Advocates wrote the Department of Financial Institutions in 2013 regarding some title lenders’ requirements that borrowers provide a blank check, bank account routing numbers or other devices to permit lenders to withdraw payments in case borrowers failed to make payments on these “registration” loans. No action was taken to stop this practice. The Director of the Department of Financial Institutions later informed Arizona advocates that the law “did not prohibit” lenders from requiring the borrower’s check, therefore, no action was deemed necessary.²⁶ There is no policy directive available to the public from the Department that confers authority on licensed Sales Finance companies to secure a loan with the borrower’s check or access to the borrower’s bank account.

In 2015, Arizonans for Responsible Lending coalition members, including the Center for Economic Integrity, met with staff from the Arizona Office of Attorney General regarding tactics used by title loan licensees to evade the usury law. The Consumer Federation of America Senior Fellow explained the expansion of loans made to consumers without a clear title to secure loans and the requirement that borrowers provide access to their bank accounts to obtain “registration loans.” Advocates urged enforcement action, stating that “Any small consumer loan that is not secured by a lien on a vehicle or a title should be subject to the Consumer Lender law.”²⁷ No action resulted.

The Center for Economic Integrity has met with and sent updated reports and briefs to both the Office of Attorney General and to the Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions to alert officials to tactics used by Sales Finance licensees to evade Arizona’s usury law.²⁸

Licensed Sales Finance Companies Charge Higher Rates than Prop 200 Payday Loans

As of 2022, licensed Sales Finance lenders making Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction (title) loans, including all the remaining companies that were payday lenders prior to the 2010 sunset, are making loans at even higher rates than would have been enshrined in the Arizona constitution if Prop 200 had passed. A $500 one-month SMVFT loan can cost 204 percent APR with an $85 finance charge

²⁶ Meeting with Director, Arizona Department of Financial Institutions, Phoenix, /AZ, July 19, 2016. At that meeting, Mr. Charlton also stated that Sales Finance licensees were permitted to make SMVFT loans despite no clear title to secure loans, based on verbal advice from the Office of Attorney General.

DIFI Public Information on Sales Finance Licenses and SMVFT (Title) Loans

According to the Superintendent of the Department of Financial Institutions in 2016, an informal opinion was obtained from the Attorney General's office that a loan qualified under the Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transaction section of the Arizona Code as long as the loan note stated that the loan was secured by a vehicle.²⁹ There is no policy statement or public information to that effect from either DIFI or the Office of Attorney General available to Arizona consumers.

The Arizona Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions which licenses Sales Finance companies making SMVFT title loans provides scant information about this product for consumers.

DIFI FAQ "What is a Title Loan"

DIFI currently answers "A Title loan is a personal loan against the title of a motor vehicle. There are caps for the loan amount. Please see A.R.S. §44-291 for cap information"

Other Qs are "What is the maximum interest rate for auto title loans?" which lists the statutory maximum finance rates as a monthly finance rate. The following Q is "How would I calculate my annual percentage rate (APR) for my auto title loan?" The answer spells out how to compute the annual rate by multiplying the monthly rate by 12.³⁰

Licensee Information

DIFI does not post on its website the full roster of licensed Sales Finance companies which can only be obtained by public records request. The public can look up the license status by company name only. DIFI does not make public a list of all licensed Sales Finance companies that make Secondary Motor Vehicle Finance Transactions (title) loans. Since the law does not require it, DIFI collects no annual report information from Sales Finance licensees and publishes no information on the volume of loans made, loan terms, defaults and repossession data or any other information on the title loan industry.

Regulatory Alerts

In 2013, the Department of Financial Institutions issued a regulatory alert to companies licensed under the Motor Vehicle time Sales Disclosure Act that make SMVFT (auto title) loans concerning fees that could be charged by title lenders. DFI and the Office of Attorney General stated that document preparation fees were not expressly allowed by law and would no longer be allowed to be charged by lenders on or after July 1, 2013.³⁴

Enforcement Actions

The Department of Insurance and Financial Institutions lists six enforcement actions against Sales Finance licensees on its website as of August 2022. Of those, three involve companies making SMVFT (title) loans.

Kathleen Marie Mason d/b/a Advance Cash was found in violation of law for charging rates greater than the law permitted, among other violations. The Consent Order identified the product offered as a “title” loan, not as a “registration” loan. There is no mention in the 2012 order whether Advance Cash offered loans secured by a clear title or whether loans were made to borrowers who did not own their vehicles.³⁵ Currently, Advance Cash in Yuma only makes “registration” loans.

DFI cited two title lenders in 2014 that were owned by the same company for violating the Arizona law’s annual loan cost disclosure requirement. A Speedy Cash Title Loans, LLC³⁶ and Todd Car Title, Inc.

d/b/a A Speedy Cash Car Title Loans³⁷ were cited for failing to disclose the cost of loans as an “annual secondary motor vehicle finance rate as the product of the monthly secondary motor vehicle finance rate multiplied by 12.” Both companies were disclosing only the federally required Annual Percentage Rate under the Truth in Lending Act. Neither consent order mentions whether loans were secured by a clear title to the borrower’s vehicle.

DIFI has posted no enforcement actions against Sales Finance licensees including those making title loans since 2014.³⁸

Summary: In 2000, the Arizona legislature enacted two exceptions to the Consumer Lender usury law protections, permitting title lenders to make loans secured by the borrower’s vehicle or a lien on the vehicle and payday lenders to make loans secured by a check held for future deposit. The title loan law did not authorize loans secured by encumbered vehicles and did not authorize licensed title lenders to secure loans with access to the borrower’s bank account. Sunset of the payday loan law in mid-2010 terminated authorization to charge triple-digit rates for loans secured by the borrower’s check held for future deposit.
